

David Mank, Ph.D., Professor Emeritus, Indiana University

David Mank, Ph.D., has built a distinguished career advancing employment and education opportunities for individuals with disabilities, including his roles as Professor Emeritus at Indiana University and former Director of the Indiana Institute on Disability and Community. From 2022 to 2025, he served as Senior Advisor at the Office of Disability Employment Policy within the U.S. Department of Labor. An accomplished researcher and writer, Dr. Mank has authored numerous articles and book chapters on competitive integrated employment, community living, and the transition from school to work.